Investment justification

According to a message from Elon Musk posted on the social network X, on November 16, it became known that Tesla, with the direct participation of Elon Musk, will hold a long-awaited presentation of the start of the transfer of Tesla Cybertruck electric vehicles to the first customers who have been waiting for their cars since December 2019.

As noted on the company's website, only those who can confirm their ownership of company shares as of the date of the event, November 30, 2023, will be allowed to participate in the event.

In this regard, we understand that the main goal is the meeting of the head of Tesla with key investors, against the backdrop of the start of deliveries of the most anticipated Tesla model, which, most likely, will be accompanied not only by production prospects, but also by reporting data on what the actual number of preliminary The company has orders for the Tesla Cybertruck.

It should be recalled that in the first week after the presentation, Elon Musk announced on Twitter that the company had received 650,000 orders for a new promising model, after which he stopped publishing data.

We expect that the publication of data on the actual number of Tesla Cybertruck orders during the event may increase investor interest in the company's shares, raising their price to $270 per share on the day of the presentation.
